Attributes and Values

Emotional competence and people skills

I have excellent emotional self-awareness and expression with an ability to empathically connect with others. I have effective self-management skills and likewise can successfully and respectfully deal with the feelings of others. I tend to be chosen as a confidante and mediator, and am committed to empowering others.

Analytical and conceptual

I am very interested in the big picture, particularly regarding people, mission, values and systems. I have an appreciation of the importance of research for practitioners, and ground my work in empirical evidence and practice wisdom.

Highly conscientious

I am methodical and careful about details, procedures and accuracy. Deadlines and completion are important. I am able to rise to meet others' expectations, and have good forward planning and time management skills. I am an enthusiastic, energetic worker and able to manage multiple diverse tasks simultaneously.

Value integrity and curiosity

I strongly value integrity over short-term benefits or personal gain and it is essential to work for a meaningful purpose. I am stimulated by intellectual challenge and enjoy some ambiguity and paradox. I am skilled in information seeking and committed to personal development.

Committed team member

I recognise group dynamics and value team approaches. I enjoy communicating and consulting with colleagues, respecting differences, achieving consensus, building bridges and negotiating.

Respect professional ethics

I work in environments where ethical behaviours permeate professional interactions. This includes respect for all people, making a difference, an active awareness of professional obligations, and a commitment to supervision and continuing education.
